Rotkreuz, Düsseldorf, April 06, 2016 – Innovative, smart and secure are buzz words that once again dominate the scenery of this year's conhIT, Europe's largest industry event for healthcare IT. Against this background, exceet Secure Solutions AG, a member of exceet Group, as co-exhibitor of CCESigG (Hall 4.2 / D-119) will showcase its competencies in e-health for the connected healthcare system of the future from April 19-21, 2016, and demonstrate how security can be integrated into connected medicine of tomorrow.

The development and realization of secure e-health solutions is one of the core competencies of exceet Secure Solutions. The IT security expert thus produces sustainable improvements in medical care for patients and increased profitability for care providers and cost bearers.

e-Health Solutions for All Actors in Healthcare

At the booth of exceet, visitors can gain insights into core topics like connecting medical devices and patients as well as using telemedicine solutions for the purpose of secure and comprehensive inter-sectoral exchanges of information without any loss of efficiency. The telematics infrastructure (TI), required for the utilization of the new electronic health card (eGK), has therefore laid an essential foundation. exceet Secure Solutions has already significantly contributed to the development of the TI and thereby assumed a major role in connecting all the participants in the healthcare system.

“The legal course has been set, the starting signal for the digitization of healthcare is given,” underlines Martin Schlüter, Head of Segment e-Health at exceet Secure Solutions, the growing importance of the health telematics field. “The necessary conditions for a digital infrastructure are already created. For medical institutions and device manufacturers, now is the time to examine potential use scenarios for their products and services as well as develop eGK-compatible applications and models that later can be integrated into the telematics. This is the field exceet broadens and deepens its products and services for the connected healthcare system of the future.”
